FINALLY

With such a paucity of input from other quarters, I feel obliged to fill up some space with interesting observations and witty monologue. However, as I am not one to succumb easily to senses of obligation, the following may well be neither witty nor interesting.

Firstly, and most importantly, the sight of Ryan Nelsen and his band of merry men holding off some of the world's best footballers, and going through the most important sporting tournament in the world unbeaten, was an achievement that ranks amongst the best. It was just a pity they couldn't get just an ounce of luck and progress to the next stage. Australia, also, played well but just fell short of qualifying for the round of 16 so our little bit at the bottom of the world acquitted itself admirably.

The Davis Cup in Hawera is not to be missed. There are still a couple of spots available on the corporate table if anyone wants a court-side view of the action. As David Butters insists that the Pakistanis haven't a hope in hell, and with our innate need to support the underdog, we have decided to become Pakistan supporters for the day. There are two training sessions before the event, so that we can learn to wrap a turban and wobble our heads with the best of them. The quaint Islamic custom of lashing anyone who lets alcohol pass their lips will be conveniently ignored on the day, though. We intend to purchase some of those annoying Sith Efrican vulvazulas to blow on throughout the matches, in between mouthfulls of curry. Hopefully we can distinguish, toward the end of the day, which to blow and which to eat.

I suppose I should mention that amazing Mens' singles match at Wimbledon, in which the fifth set comprised no less than 138 games! I suppose we should be thankful that these days tie-breaks can at least be applied in the first four sets.

If anyone remembers Tommy Cooper, you'll enjoy these....

1. Two blondes walk into a building...you'd think at least one of them would have seen it.

2. Phone answering machine message, "If you want to buy marijuana, press the hash key..."

3. A guy walks into the psychiatrist wearing only Clingfilm for shorts. The shrink says,

"Well, I can clearly see you're nuts."

4. I went to buy some camouflage trousers the other day but I couldn't find any.

5. I went to the butchers and I bet him 50 quid that he couldn't reach the meat off the top shelf. He said, "No, the steaks are too high."

Enjoy your tennis.
