Welcome all, in this edition:

- Nothing
- Even less
- Finally – Random stuff

FINALLY

It was sad to hear of Seve Ballesteros' passing. In the traditional Spanish fashion he will be buried in the same grave as his Father. He will be one over pa.

As you can tell, the quality of my jokes is diminishing with every passing week, but there is always the good old pun to keep things rolling along. I am so fond of puns that I gathered my ten favourites and entered them into an international pun competition. I wanted at least one to get a placing, but unfortunately, no pun in ten did.

If you are happy to read on after that then I salute you.

Referring to last week's (Roland) Hiri-karri joke, I should clarify that it was a play on words, taken from the Japanese ritual method of suicide, hari kari. I say this for the benefit of Nancy Wineera (a teacher, no less) who thought that hiri-karri was a highly stylised Maori toenail clipping technique. She still found it funny though, so go figure...

Hats off to Kyle Butters, who last week clobbered every opponent thrown at him in singles, including the cream of the Oceanian/Asian crop. At just fourteen, his future looks very rosy, and he could soon be earning enough to keep his parents in the manner to which they would like to become accustomed.

Enjoy your tennis.
